The Flat Earth Theorem (ad infinitum); a poem

The universe.

Stars.

You can fall off the end;
off a planet, beware of the waterfall.

Gravity binds you to the ground,
yet angels wings flap,
allowing them and creatures of the sky to reach the heights,
as with ships to vacuum frontier.

People starve for my ignorance and yours,
our shared truth, in which our exile from heaven is the cursed gift

Dear sir/madam,

1. The United Nations is flawed due to the fact that the American Constitution (which can be changed) will not allow global disarmament. As such it cannot be allowed to be the only Headquarters in the world for a multinational organisation with a remit and scope that focuses solely on Global Disarmament, health and peace, security, food provision and access to education or legislation to say the least. As Americans hold the right to bear arms as sacred as the image of Martin Luther King who was assassinated as with one of possibly the best of their former Presidents, and desecrated the memory of Rosa Parks, whom in recent history is forgotten as a shadow of an age that didn't exist. Through their actions words and deeds, a Civil Rights Movement which became the envy of the world has now become defunct with the advent and use of a word that sparked the "Black Lives Matter!" campaign. That is not equality (I state this as an African / Afro-Scot / Briton).

The same Civil Rights movement which, to this day has not been emulated by anyone, except the international image of a mother who would later be forgotten (who was pictured fighting police during a civil rights movement) destroyed the same movement in one simple gesture – a Nobel Peace prize for a man who would later stand on a podium and state as his crowning glory, "We killed Osama Bin Laden!" whilst prior to his inauguration the former President dragged democracy under the wheels of an American tank, plane or aeroplane carrier across the entire planet into a war through education, television, cinema and all manner of media outlets, for the sake of resources that to this day have caused countless untold deaths.

Had every American citizen refused to travel to Africa in the 1600's the world would be a better place (or pretty much the same only with American citizens – mostly formerly British citizens who fought for independence from their Queen with a view to create slavery of all of mankind with the rest of the western world). Had every American Citizen founded an ideal of sharing and prepared their religion to go overseas (not on the words "In God We Trust") the world would be a better place. Had the world listened to the plea of current untold generations of malnutrition, sickness (in the form of H.I.V/Aids and Cancer, Ebola and Yellow Fever etc.) or actual starvation and corruption, the world would be a better place. Had the world chosen Africa instead of the Middle East as the birth place of Christ, there would have been a different outcome to the death and resurrection of a Christ through all churches due to an actual plea for the reparations which have arrived in the form of actual racism. That is the hatred that one group would or does feel towards another group based on difference. This is likely due to the evolution of the genome (we now call human) but of which, over millions of years led to the extinction of the rest of the Humanoid (and I use this term loosely due to the nature of the Americanisation of the entire world through all forms of media) species of which only what remains to this day is what survived over countless millions of years.

Every decision, word and thought that a person conceives over time is a choice. As an African / Afro-Scot / Briton, I have found that humanity is desperate for hope, for repentance and faith but unwilling to show the same, due to the ability to pray for change and then leave it in the hands of God. I renounced my faith a while back and now am left struggling to understand why my life is in ruin(s) yet I know that it is my own fault for the decisions and choices I made have secured my own failure in all but name, through the voices of an unending choral song we call racism / classism / elitism / hate.

Religion is love, but not for everyone. If you know the Beatitudes, that is the sole aim ultimately, of Religion. To teach people who are possibly good / possibly bad how to do better for other people. How to care for other people. I could judge other people, but I choose not to, and rather state what I have physically seen in the world through the media. I have not received American hospitality, and can assume that it would be very kindly, and polite. But at the same time, possibly a little different to what I have witnessed of late, such that I feel traumatised by life, not just where I live but where I do not live. I do not hate anyone, I am not Anti-American, I am just conscious of the fact that whilst internally, competition has caused individual leaders to lose sight of the fact that other countries have struggles with poverty and health and education of an entire populous that does not necessarily involve the need for armed conflict with 'a super power'.

During the Dark Ages, in middle England, which is still a Kingdom to this day, I wonder, would all the people who are now American, have existed were it not for mass migration to the Kingdom of Great Britain, formerly of the Angles or Anglo-Saxons which later became England, Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales. Equally, would Ireland have been corrupted and turned to Terrorism (which existed before the modern age through and immortalised by a man known as Guy Fawkes – who was English, every 5th of November, as a means to stopping the public from terrorising anyone, and especially the government of the day).

Witch trials, which were important and of which modern and ancient popular culture has been glamorised by many forms and mediums such as stage performances, likely very expensive, or books, comics, films, dramatisations and so on, down to fancy dress costumes have now become the norm in the form of educational entertainment for children. To talk of irreligious aspects of a person's work, writing or material, such as for instance 'him who shall not be named' must remember that, it is not a religion. The writer was not famous before she wrote the book (to the best of my knowledge) but after and further afield (god willing).

Scotland, may have created banking (through the Bank of Scotland). England may have created the sub-prime market (through the Royal Bank of Scotland). Ireland may have fought with the 'British' through the Irish Republican Army. And Wales are good at rugby. But as a nation, the United Kingdom pays homage to Her Majesty the Queen, regardless of personal or national conviction, sentiment or practically every reason throughout history of which, where you are a subject, you are honour bound to respect the Royal Family and do as they say for Queen and Country.

To say that America ended the slave trade, pretty much 50 years or more after potentially the world, has left me with no doubt as to the nature of my dissatisfaction with how African(s) are portrayed in either the media, or in personal discussions. But to say anyone who is not American (that is anyone without a passport in American) is racist would be unfair and rude of me. So in light of this, I will apologise to all Americans for the slave trade. As it was my fault. I must have willingly chosen to become "the sub-prime / sub-human / whatever you wish to call me as it is disrespectful either way". Equally, the gulf war, followed by the Gulf War II which led to the hanging of Sadaam Hussein and an increase in the death toll has forgotten one very important fact of which I have already apologised for. This fact is simple. It must have been my fault that Africa as a continent made up of many countries, of which Zambia is only one, is still stuck in the darkest of ages in which, people don't have lights, showers, or shower gel. They don't have hope, but they have faith. The corruption is not the same as in the west but it must be my fault so I will apologise.

To say that the World needs Global Disarmament of all civilian populations, and for all armies to be transferred with immediate effect to the United Nations, or the European Union, or The African Union, with a view to disarming and creating headquarters in every country for each individual supra-national organisation is just a suggestion and request (but I am sorry if it does not happen as I am just expressing my thoughts, hopes, dreams, and potentially that is the plan). To say that it is unfair for anyone to have to live in poverty is a joke, a cruel and bitter twist of fate. As there is poverty everywhere in every nation and yet, learning to kill one another is a societal good that only bearing armaments towards other people, societal groups and nations is now the reason that even the Roman Empire pales in significance in comparison to the present age.

Whilst it could have been the French nations with their ideals, or the Dutch who nailed people in coffins, probably alive, or the Germans, who needed resources for war, or the Japanese, Chinese, or any number of Bomb bearing nations, 'traditionally named Nuclear nations or Super powers or Axis Forces or Axis Nations' etc, it is with a heavy heart that I place the blame of error on the nation that carried the gun. That created the gun. That immortalised the gun. And that to this day allows kids to live on the streets without guns. Because, they would be the ones who most deserve freedom. The homeless.

All of my books have the same constant themes, that is War and (or) Peace. Russia, is an enemy of America. America is an enemy of Syria. Syria has refugees spilling into Germany. Germany is hated by Poland. Poland is next door to Austria, Switzerland (where the banks are very much quite full all the time etc.). Afghanistan has poppy fields that are used for opiates such as medicines, painkillers and Ketamine (?) which is a societal ill. Iraq potentially had gold. Egypt is close to the country where Col. Gadaffi was run through the streets and basically beaten to death for the corruption he caused. Zimbabwe which is next door to Zambia, has only recently deposed a dictator known as Mugabe who tried to do what president Putin of Russia is presently attempting to do; that is he became a Tsar (dictator and racist).

Everyone hates Britain for colonialism, and taking over the world. But the monarch of recent days has had the honour and majesty to return independence to countries that were taken by her predecessors. i.e. Hong Kong, which is in China, is now under Chinese rule, in which they are attempting to remove the Democracy that was put in place, hence the riots. Australia, is where convicts were formerly placed and now, despite the flourishing and majestic nature of the skyscrapers, the indigenous tribes, known as Aborigine's or Aboriginal people(s) are still treated not as second class citizens but similar to slaves who live in bushes (from what I have seen in the media). But I don't always believe what I see in the media, for obvious reasons (such as the manipulation and psychological use of words and of images).

As the leader of World Cinema, (American), America has the means to create an image of Global Disarmament similar to that of the lifestyles and culture of Scotland, in which Scotland pretty much disarmed the civilian public. And although the Heroin (Afghanistan) is a problem. Or the Crack (American) or the Lsd (who knows), or the Cocaine (formerly a medication) or the Cannabis (which of course is readily available in cafes (Amsterdam)). Now, to say that it is a problem, substance misuse, is a thing. To say it is endemic is also a thing. But to say the world is crazy about Alcohol and cigarettes is also crazy. And yet, Gene Roddenberry creator of a television series that depicts the future, and also technology and also science, had a vision which many people do not as yet understand (through the words of the now immortal Donald Trump's Space Force, which is reminiscent of Rodenberry's Star Trek). The same television series that created an image of Utopia and also of disarmament of sorts due to advanced technology, such as China's Rail Gun or Russia's torsion field experimentation, has left Religion asking, can Israel ever repay the world for killing the son of God, of whom Christians across the world will be praying for Angela Merkhel to go to Israel.

Meanwhile, the Make Poverty History Campaign which ended in global peaceful protests has led to 12 years of (in my life, homelessness, which I find ironic, as I have published book after book begging, praying for and hoping for Global Disarmament). The United Nations works towards this goal world wide but Korea (North Korea) nearly started a war with 'America' and due to ego, ended up having to disarm (to a minimal level) and then hold hands with another world leader in public as a show of trust and faith. This was known as historic. But it was just another day, which is history, therefore poverty is history, as with all the dead people who starved, or died of illnesses that are terminal and incurable at present. Meanwhile Yale University reanimated a pigs head. At the same time, it was discovered that Cloning of humanity is a thing, and also a bad thing at that. And at the same time, faith in which a pope was either punched or appeared on T.V. with a black eye, in front of the worlds media is a thing also. However, despite genocide, and despite human rights abuses, lack of democracy or even protection from the elements, (such as increasing temperatures and increasing tide, without food, or jobs, or education, or opportunity, people in Africa, in comparison to India or any other country are left without any support). So, South America, which has culture, clothing, food, buildings and democracy (failing at times, winning at times and spiked by big brother America at times) is still having to pay the world super power for a wall they cannot afford and did not want, due to the fact that there are gangs who are enslaving citizens and then killing them, in order to produce narcotics, prostitution, weapons and generally bad stuff which is only from an outside perspective.

At the same time, Gaza, which is a place in the Middle East, not far from Israel (where there are two passports for Jewish Israelis and Arab Israelis due to the differences in religion) is currently occupied and no-one does anything about it, because, they killed Jesus. Now if Germany can get away with a holocaust, but Israel will continue to emulate Germany, should the world listen or fight racism?

2. Only one hip-hop star has ever mentioned Global Disarmament to the best of my knowledge and is the only one worth his weight in salt (salt being in biblical times very expensive). But, due to racism, there is another hip-hop star who was badly beaten. Another who was badly racially abused. Another who lost an eye. Another who beat up his girlfriend and another who is generally religious. If Jesus were here, would he say, we as people, individuals or groups are lost or found regardless of whether we believe? Would Jesus have stood up to persecution to the death (which is what he did) or would he have shouted, let's not fight (which he did, to the death).

Now, if Captain Kirk were Jesus he would fight, to the death. But, Captain Kirk, legend though he was, was an actor who beat up people (acting) for a living, and pretended to be in space. The real Captain Kirk is a scientist who works on the most advanced science experiment known to man, creating mobile phones? Vaccines? Television programmes? Pictures from space? Ideas? Dreams? Hopes? This science experiment is known as the International Space Station, in which there are likely people from all over the world (including Russians) who work together and don't kill each other. Funny, because we the people cannot do the same without a thought of murder or killing or even ingesting the same societal ills that make me ill. i.e. medications or television programmes or religious sentiment without meaning or even hip-hop.

Many people think rapping is about making money. It started off about stopping the police from killing people of ethnicity. And now, years on from shootings, murders and so on and so forth, the same thing is still going on. So what is the point in making money, if it is the route to all evil? Well, if it puts food in the bellies of the fat, then great. If it means a big house, even better. If it means living to excess then woohoo (actual word). Because Jesus did not have a grave, he cannot roll in it (the grave as opposed to money or capitalism).

Socialism vs. Capitalism (not talking nationalist socialism which died with all the bad guys) but actual socialism which is equivalent to a welfare system (as enshrined by the Human Rights Act, Declaration of Human Rights and European Convention on Human Rights etc.) is pretty much not an African ideal, due to the fantastic reparations that were provided to all the fine people of African states. But, this is important to note as my friend who died in vain, reparations are not for one or another country to decide, but rather for all. So, why not vote Disarmament as opposed to paying money through the nose for slavery? What court in the world would sue every western nation for the price of slavery? What court in the world would sue every nation for the price of slavery? None. Therefore the law is defunct and only serves those who can afford it (i.e. there is no honour, only corruption). And as a result, people are dying in Scotland (civilians) by overdose, or jumping off of bridges or monuments, out of windows, off of hills and the list goes on. Mental ill health is very high here. Unemployment is very high here. Schools are closed here. So, if people are becoming dumbed down or uneducated, there is no point in schools. If there is no point in school all there is and will be is war. And as a result it is murder of an entire planetary population. So, if you pray (I do not), then this is a good reason to pray. We as a civilisation, are not going to meet Jesus. If he is in hell, we are likely already saved. If he is in heaven, we are already in hell. And if there is a purgatory, then I haven't read about it in the bible. Therefore I renounce God, and Satan and all things until Global Disarmament.

3. The evil inherent in blaxploitation that is the exploitation of black people (coined in the 70s or thereabouts) has led to the modern preoccupation with the failure(s) that are exhibited in society through the modern use of technology in order to destroy the foundation of a strong and moral childhood or lessons learnt from relatively stable parents. Both my parents were relatively stable, and as such I was lucky to witness university, to have friends and to then grow older and 'wiser' although I missed the point to life. Because I assumed that allowing myself to be the man I am whilst listening to corrupting influences on a daily basis because I assumed that education was an end all and be all was enough to destroy me as a person. I have always looked up to everyone, that is, everyone I have pretty much ever met from celebrities to the counter staff in Gregg's. The irony is, if I had trusted myself, rather than other people, I might have achieved something with my time / life / education instead of waiting for God whilst on hunger strike in a country that should not have homeless people at all. To say that our leaders in thought, word or deed have let us down due to their humanity, is the same reason that I am renouncing my faith in all things human, which would then mean I am now inhuman of which I can not ever return to the previous point of which I once assumed was normal. Therefore, the joy of living, loving and growing old, or bold or wildly individualistic or what ever people think is normal, is what I now lack and pretty much have grown used to not having for so long that all I do is write, hope and still have faith in others (the good will and belief of others as I don't know how to showcase the better nature of humanity outside of meaningless words that no-one will ever see).

4. Soul music. What is a soul? Is it the ethereal transference of energy, matter, spirit, thought, brainwaves. And music, which was a holy thing, as it is in the bible is now popular, which was not in the bible. Jesus died 2000 years and like the Terminator (popular culture reference) he said "I will be right back" (not an exact quote) but none the less the message is there. So if he died, and someone lied, and he isn't coming back, then hey, in God you consume and in no god I believe. So thankyou for reading this and I hope you have a great, fantastic, brilliant day in which, my birthday is the title of this book etc.

5. Is it crazy, to say I need a psychiatrist in order to repeat the remit of a Supra-national Non-governmental Inter-departmental Quasi-operational Organisation. Global Disarmament is organised, attributed to and run by none other than the world. So, in short, if you (your country) want to believe you are a good person, look at the United Nations website – un.org; then the European Union – europa.eu and then the African Union – au.int and then tell me what the difference is between them and why Africa is trying to get to space in 2063 which is 100 years after the original moon landings. What does that say about the rate of progression of the rest of the world.

Who pays for satellites? Who builds satellites? Why do we need Gps, when a map is always right? If this is the space age(?) then I guess I might just go to the pub (when I get my benefits) and console myself with the thought of not having a god, of whom you trust.
